Many of the colonial buildings have survived to this day, such as the Cathedral, which is from the eighteenth century, the City Hall and the building of the former Royal Court (now the National Historical Museum), along with the Post Office and its French style architecture, which are all located in front of Plaza de Armas. The visit also includes the path through the Civic Center and Plaza de la Constitución, where you can find the headquarter of the national government La Moneda.

Crossing the Forest Park and the Mapocho River, you reach the Cerro San Cristóbal and from the top you have one of the best panoramic views over the city and the great mountains that surround the Chilean capital.
